

Lab 4: CSS Grid

- 0- Open the provided starting code. The given HTML displays commercial information about books. For each book, a picture, title, author and a buy button are included.
- 1- Put every group in an article.
- 2- Apply the flex layout approach to each article to display the elements vertically. Add every style necessary to obtain a result that is similar to the following example:

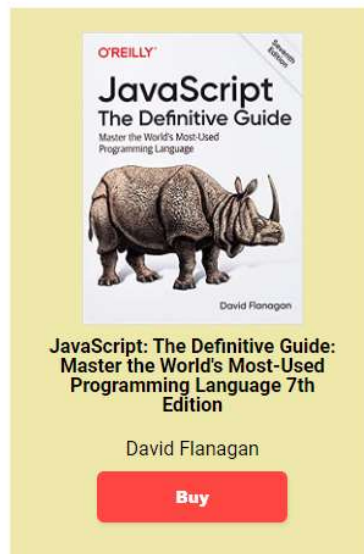

Fig. Example of one book flex box.

- 3- Include all the articles in a section element. Then, apply the grid approach to organize the flex boxes in a grid that displays at most three books per row. Here is an example of the expected result:
